and organisations throughout his years of service to the nation."

He added that the Board is therefore thankful to the Governor General for being a national role model and for his yearly travel by train to the Denbigh Agricultural show.

In his reply, Sir Florizel said he was touched by the honour bestowed on him, adding that although he was paying his last official visit to Denbigh, he will continue to attend the show yearly.

Regarding the problems being experienced by the Railway, the Governor General said he was confident that the efforts being made to "turn the company around" would materialise.

Sir Florizel was presented with a painting, depicting a train at a railway station. It was done by well known painter, Alexander Cooper. He also received a model wooden train from general manager of the JRC, Owen Crooks.
