THE British Caribbean 'standard of judgment.'

Association Newsletter, published in England, has paid tribute to the late Rt. Excellent Norman Manley, National Hero, who it described as "a big man by any

"The spontaneous expression of admiration and grief at his passing illustrates in a small way, what he meant to generations of Jamaicans both past and future.

"He was not just a big man on a small island, he was a big man by any standard of judgment, and his ability was known and respected beyond Jamaica," stated the newsletter in a memorial tribute.

The newsletter said that Mr. Manley was in the forefront of Jamaica's national and political life for more than three decades and her modern political development owes an incalculable debt to him.

Himself and the Rt. Excellent Sir Alexander Bustamante must be regarded as the architects of the political and economic development since 1938, the newsletter commented.

"His name will live forever in Jamaica, and his life set a glowing example to us all," the newsletter stated.
