Una Marson here

IN JAMAICA AGAIN is Miss Una Marson, journalist and poet whose home is in Washington. This is her second visit this year. Arriving at the same time in Jamaica is one of her children's stories published in the "American Junior Red Cross NEWS" of December 1960. Coming as a complimentary copy to the Jamaican branch of the Red Cross Society the little magazine is very popular in America.

Miss Marson's story, "Christmas on Poinsettia Island" is the lead article of the issue. It is illustrated by American artist James Porter, with large bright poinsettia, and a John Canoe band.

Over the last two years, Miss Marson attended the George Washington University Workshop, which specializes in courses of writing for children. She has sold several other stories to children's magazines in America. Apart from this new interest in writing for children, Miss Marson pursued her old field of writing for theatre and attended a summer course at the Catholic University Drama School in writing for theatre and TV.

Asked about her immediate plans, Miss Marson says that she hopes to continue writing especially for children's magazines and books, for the theatre and radio and hopes to do some broadcasting too. At present she is staying with her sister Mrs. Ethel Marson in Kingston.
