

Save the Children Fund

mourns Una Marson

The Jamaica Save the Children Fund issued the following statement Thursday in regard to the late Miss Una Marson, one of the founders and executive of the Fund:

The Jamaica Save the Children Fund, one of the pioneer charitable organizations, mourns the sudden death of its executive secretary, Miss Una Marson. Miss Marson, founder of this Fund, worked with the organization for very many years, before working abroad.

She returned to the Fund in 1961, and took up duties as its executive secretary. In the four years she served in this capacity, she accomplished a great deal for the benefit of the Fund. Among other things, she won for the Fund the attention, support and recognition of the public.

During her term as secretary the Foreshore Road Infant Centre was added to the Fund's group of centres. She gave unstinted support to the work among Rastafarians in that area.

Through her instrumentality, the Fund has received several bales of clothing and toys for both children and adults from abroad. These have been distributed from time to time in the most needy areas.

She was responsible for the Jamaica Save the Children becoming linked with other organizations throughout the world.

Recently while in England she helped to produce the showing of a film sponsored by the British SCF to help the Fund in Jamaica.

She will be greatly missed by members of the executive committee, staff, teachers, and other workers of the Fund.
